Dear Students:

Welcome to the J. Reuben Clark Law School at BYU! As you begin your studies in August, you will note that diligent class preparation and participation are integral parts of the law school experience. Your legal education is calculated to help you develop lawyering skills such as issue identification, analysis of case and statutory law, ethical and public policy considerations and legal research, in addition to written and oral advocacy.

While all of you will find that acquiring these skills is demanding, others will face a greater challenge because of a substantial disability. The Law School recognizes its opportunity to meet the needs of our students who require accommodations under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

If you need an accommodation in order to fully participate in the law school experience, early disclosure of such needs is critical. Once you present the relevant documentation, the Law School can work with you individually and can carefully and thoroughly consider your needs and assist you in receiving the best legal education possible. Providing this information now allows me to prepare the resources necessary to accommodate your circumstances in time for your arrival in August.

Accordingly, I ask that you contact me as soon as possible to discuss any accommodations which you feel are necessary to help you succeed in law school. I can be reached at (801) 422-5576 or by e-mail at pullinsk@law.byu.edu.

Sincerely,
